Brian Barnhart grew up on a farm outside of Tolono, IL. He attended Liberty College with the hopes of being a history teacher; but graduated and entered a career centered around working on the radio. He started out doing broadcasts for some minor league baseball teams and progressively moved up while also moving around. He accomplished a personal goal in 1998 by becoming the radio voice for the Anaheim Angels, the MLB club in California. He came back to Illinois after a deal to join the Montreal Expos fell through.

He has been the voice of the Illini since the early 2000's. Right now, the job is fun and exciting! The team is looking good and coming off two big wins over Northwestern and Indiana Universities. Brian feels the future of both the basketball and football programs is bright. The recruiting has been good and the team chemistry is getting better.

Brian fielded several questions from the audience and I enjoyed listening to what he had to say. Go Illini!!! Josh
